JAMES HOSMER
1635

I—JAMES HOSMER¹, son of Stephen and Dorothy Hosmer, the immigrant of the family in Massachusetts, was born in 1607 in England. He came from Hawkhurst, Kent County, to America in the ship "Elizabeth," sailing April 9, 1635, aged twenty-eight years, with his wife Ann aged twenty-seven, and children, Marie aged two years and Ann aged three months; also maid servants, Marie Donnard aged twenty-four, and Marie Martin aged nineteen. Jo Ston aged forty, Edward Gold aged twenty-eight, George Russell aged nineteen, Jo. Massell aged fifteen. He was a clothier by trade. He settled at Cambridge, Massachusetts, and was admitted a freeman May 17, 1637. He sold land there before 1638. He removed to Concord, Massachusetts, where his descendants have been numerous. He had a brother, Thomas Hosmer, who also settled in Cambridge where he was a proprietor as early as 1633; was admitted a freeman May 6, 1635; was town officer there, but removed to Hartford, Connecticut and is progenitor of the Connecticut family of Hosmer. These were the only two pioneers of this surname.

James Hosmer died February 7, 1685, Concord, Massachusetts. His first wife Ann was born 1608. He had a second wife Mary, who was buried May 11, 1641. His third wife Elinne (Ellen) (also given Alice in some records) died March 3, 1664-65.

The following document, used in the Blood-Billerica controversy is interesting as forming a part of "the old towne booke," which was partially copied in 1664, but was afterwards unfortunately lost.

"The 21^d May 1660.

A Comittee Chosen by the Towne of Concord to lay out the Major Willards one thousand acres of land, with the Major himselfe Thomas Brooke Robert Ffletcher and George Wheeler: the dimensions of it as followeth

- 1 The first corner begining upon Chelmsford line runing southward 170 Rods.
- 2 The second line Westward 360 Rods.
- 3 The third line northward meeting with Chelmsford line 390 Rods.

4 The fourth line Eastward along Chelmsford line 640 Rods.

This was don by a mutuall consent of the Major Willard and the Comittee Chosen by the Towne: Witness their hands hereunto

Upon complaint made in the year 1660, for want of a public house, a license was obtained in October, to keep a house of common entertainment.

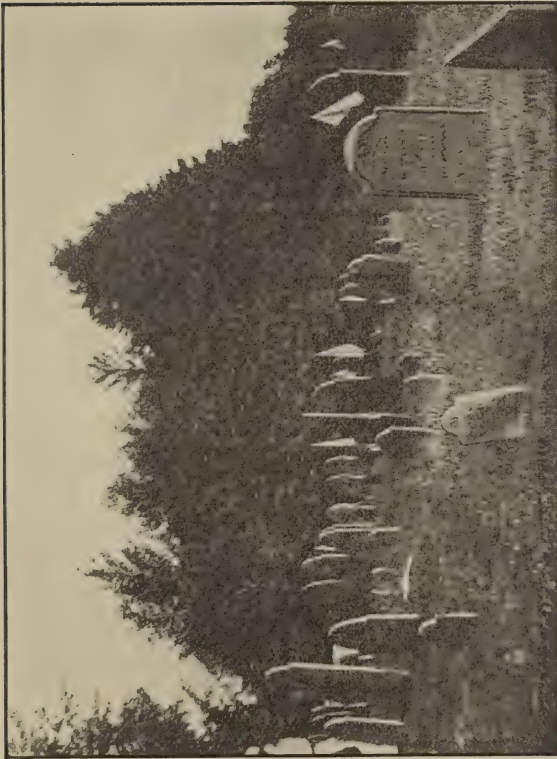

The application was indorsed by the selectmen as follows:—

“To the honored Cort meeting at Cambridge Octobr 2^d 1660.

OLD FLAX MILL ON LAND OF JAMES¹ HOSMER

Acton, Mass.

Land acquisitions were added to the original grant made by the Colonial Court, among which were Concord village (Acton), and the Blood farm (Carlisle).

The names of all the settlers who had reached the place of settlement by 1635 and 1636 is uncertain but a part of them are Reverend Peter Bulkeley, Elder John Jones, Hayward, Potter, Ball, Rice, Hartwell, Meriam, Heald, Fletcher, William and Thomas Bateman, Hosmer, Judson, Griffin, George, Joseph and Obadiah Wheeler. Peter Bulkeley came from Wodell, Bedfordshire county, England; James Hosmer from Hawkhurst in Kent; John Heald from Berwick in Northumberland; and the Wheelers according to tradition, from Wales.

The Major Simon Willard house site is near the South Bridge and is marked by a tablet. The identity of this spot is unmistakable. Probably the house when erected ended the road towards the wilderness and was literally "out west."

The first neighbor to live on the westward beyond Mr. Willard was perhaps James Hosmer.

At the time of his death, 1659, Reverend Peter Bulkeley, first minister and one of the founders of Concord, lived "next ye mill-pond," but owned a farm called "Brook Meadow," lying beyond the South River, with a house and barn on it, and a part or the whole of the Iron Works. The farm, comprising forty-two acres, was sold to Stephen Hosmer², ancestor of Everett Hosmer Barney.

"The old cemetery contains fourteen or fifteen of the oldest gravestones in Concord, and more than two-thirds of all the monuments and other markers bearing names of the original inhabitants of the town, are in this enclosure.

THE ROWLANDSON BOULDER
Lancaster, Mass.

SITE OF THE ROWLANDSON GARRISON
Lancaster, Mass.

Upon these ancient tablets are the familiar names of Hosmer, Hartwell, Buttrick, Fletcher, Hayward and others."

During King Philip's war one of the principal garrisons attacked was that known as the Walter Haynes house. This house stood upon the west side of the Sudbury river, the same stream which in Concord is called the Concord river, near the meadows about midway between the present Sudbury centre, and Wayland centre.

The attack upon this house began, according to the "Old Petition," about six o'clock in the morning and was kept up till after mid-day, at times the fight occurring in the very dooryard. To this garrison house the Concord men directed their course. They probably arrived in the vicinity in the early forenoon. The fight at Green hill had not then begun, and part of the Indians had passed over the main causeway and "town bridge," which are a part of the "old road" from Wayland to Sudbury centre, and were doing mischievous work on the east side. A sufficient force was probably left at the Haynes house to keep up a hard fight with the inmates and to prevent it from being reinforced. As the Concord men drew near the garrison house, they saw a small company of Indians near it, and doubtless supposing that these were all and that they could easily overcome them and gain entrance to the building, they rushed forward forgetful in their impetuosity of the risk of an ambuscade. No sooner were they within the power of the designing savages than the latter arose in great force and placing themselves between the English and the garrison house, fell upon them with great ferocity and so disastrous was the onslaught that but one escaped.

The names of the fallen that have been preserved are James Hosmer², David Comy, William Heywood, Samuel Potter, Joseph Buttrick, John Barnes, Josiah Wheeler and Jacob Farrar. Tradition is for the most part silent as to the circumstances or any incident connected with the start, the march, or the exact details of the disaster.

It is stated that "We may presume the start was an exciting one. Perhaps the quick ear of James Hosmer was the first to catch the faint sound of distant firing as at night-fall on the previous day he went out to fodder the stock of his father's farm near the Assabet: or it may be that the tidings were brought by a scout from over the Sudbury boundary line, who scouring the forest had seen the impress of many moccasins, the sure sign of the presence of a war party."

James, the eldest son of James¹ Hosmer, married Sarah White. The record is, "James Hosmer and Sarah White Married October 14 1658." Sarah White was a daughter of John White, an early proprietor of lands in Lancaster, Massachusetts, and was a sister of the wife of the Reverend Joseph Rowlandson, minister of the church in Lancaster, Massachusetts, and who was captured by the Indians in King Philip's war and ransomed at a place near Wachusett mountain in what is now Princeton. James was killed in the Sudbury Fight, April 21, 1675.

Field where Captain Davis formed his Company before the march to the Old North Bridge April 19, 1775

On the 23d of September, 1746, a company of fifty men were detached and marched to Boston (from Concord) on an alarm on account of an expected attack from the French fleet under the Duke D'Anville. They returned in ten days. Stephen Hosmer, son of Stephen³, was one of the sergeants.

Sergeant Stephen
Hosmer was great-
great-uncle to
Everett Hosmer Barney.

Captain Stephen Hosmer, son of Stephen³, commanded a company at Fort Edward. He left Concord in September, and returned in December, 1755.

Captain Stephen
Hosmer was great-
great-uncle to
Everett Hosmer Barney.

The Journal of the General Court gives the following names of "sick and wounded soldiers" in the Crown Point expedition, 1755, from this town (Concord) who received aid from government: Amos Parlin, Daniel Brown, drummer, Stephen Hosmer and others.

Stephen Hosmer was great-great-uncle to
Everett Hosmer Barney.

The address of the citizens of Boston, of the 2nd of November, 1772, relating to the distressed state of the Province, was laid before this town (Concord), December 20th following; and a committee consisting of Joseph Lee, Charles Prescott, John Cuming, Daniel Bliss, John Flint, Deacon Thomas

Barrett, Captain Stephen Hosmer, Captain James Barrett and Ephrain Wood, junior, was chosen to prepare an answer, and instructions to the representatives of the town,

Captain Stephen

Hosmer was great-

great-uncle to

Everett Hosmer Barney.

“There were in Concord in 1654, eight families, who in the first quarter of the last century were “the most numerous families of farmers in the town,” who yet by the last quarter had largely parted with their estates. The names of these families were Buttrick, Barrett, Brown, Hunt, Hosmer, Dakin, Flint and Wood.

The Hosmers owned six farms early in the first quarter of the nineteenth century while only three remained in the family name in the last quarter, with eleven voters of the name in town.”
